Bali Hai—Golf With a Twist of Vegas.

LAS VEGAS STRIP, NEVADA: Even the most seasoned gambler would be jealous of the city's winning streak. Shortly after the Las Vegas Raiders made the Allegiant Stadium their home, the Las Vegas Golden Knights moved into T-Mobile Arena. Now, there are rumblings the Tropicana may repurpose as the site for a future Oakland Athletics ballpark.

"I call it the perfect trifecta of the NFL, NHL, and MLB to make major investments in our town," Alex Canetti, director of sales at Bali Hai Golf Club.

"Our course is a tropical golf paradise resting in the shadows of the Strip resorts. We are within earshot of Allegiant Stadium. It's common to hear a faint roar on Sundays of crowds cheering on the home team. Bali Hai is a close-by oasis from the best casino action, entertainment options, and sports games on what is arguably the most famous street in the world."

THE ONLY SURE BET IN VEGAS

More than 4,000 palm trees were shipped from California and the volcanic rock framing Bali Hai fairways came from Utah.

All told, more than 100,000 tropical plants were imported to create a feel unlike any other.

"We boast the only bet in Vegas you can't lose," grinned Canetti. "Make a wager to hit the green on No. 9 and you get 150 percent of your money in golf shop script. If you miss, you get a credit for the exact amount of your wager."

"The course has matured beautifully," commented Canetti. "We are particularly proud of our conditioning and player-friendly design. Our waste areas are banked to feed errant shots back into the fairways, and our agronomy crew recently purchased Ninja Tines equipment that is quickly becoming the benchmark for non-disruptive green aerification. You literally will be hard pressed the following day to notice the greens have been aerified." ■
