

GLACIER CLUB

NEIGHBORS HELPING NEIGHBORS

A private golf community where real mountains, real people, and real value come together.

DURANGO, COLORADO: After traveling to 107 countries, Dwight Hendrickson has become a pretty savvy traveler. He has experienced everything from the simplest of pleasures to the most opulent accommodations. "I've been fortunate to live all around the world," said Dwight, member at Glacier Club. "Two years ago, my wife Cristiane and I set out on a three month, 7,500-mile road trip to explore the Western United States. Our odyssey began in Martha, Texas. We traversed the coast and ultimately ended up in Durango.

"Durango has many 'feel goods.' It's a real town with real people who work hard, are courteous, and appreciate friendship. Unlike other well-known towns like Aspen or Vail, Durango has soul. Here, locals wave-through versus run-through traffic intersections."

Glacier Club members/owners, Cristiane and Dwight Hendrickson (center: Cristiane, in black jacket; Dwight, in white shirt), pictured with their guests at their boondoggle.

CUE NATURE

Quality golf was a key selling point in the Hendrickson's decision to join Glacier Club. The private community features 27 holes of golf, an intimate clubhouse perched on a cliff with long-range mountain views, fitness and tennis facilities, miles of walking trails, a dog park, and Camp Glacier for kids. Each of its three nines offers a distinct look and feel.

The Cliffs Course plays through ancient, glacially striated rock formations, while the Hermosa Course is shorter and walkable. And, finally, the Glacier Course iconic Matterhorn, or the grandeur of Cape Kidnappers Golf Club in New Zealand. The community's environs make me step back and ponder how insignificant we are with nature. There is a running joke at the club when we stand on the first tee," laughed Hendrickson. "We tell our guests the golf shop has a button to cue the deer and hawks for a performance."

Last month, Dwight held a four-day boondoggle for 24 friends and family members. "Everyone from the general

"OUR FRIENDLY MEMBERSHIP IS ONE OF THE REASONS WHY WE ARE SO SUCCESSFUL. THE SECOND NEW GUESTS WALK INTO THE CLUB, THEY ARE INVITED TO NEIGHBORHOOD GATHERINGS, JEEPING EXCURSIONS, AND GOLF TRIPS. WE ARE A TIGHT-KNIT FAMILY WHERE EVERYONE KNOWS YOUR NAME." – JIM GOODMAN, GENERAL MANAGER, GLACIER CLUB

creates a "oneness with nature" with few homes visible through the thick forest of trees and boulders.

The community's equity legacy expands privileges to five generations of the family under one membership. Grandparents, parents, children, and grandchildren are considered full members with access to all amenities.

"The three nines are carved into a mountainside. Our surroundings remind me of Zermatt, Switzerland, and its manager to the executive chef worked together to make it happen," explained Hendrickson. "When our neighbors learned of our upcoming party, several offered their spare bedrooms for the overflow of guests. To me, that is the real deal in life when neighbors help neighbors." ■

For information please call (866) 379-5724, or visit TheGlacierClub.com.