LESS THAN 25 PERCENT OF AMERICANS HAVE FOUR-YEAR COLLEGE DEGREES. IN BOZEMAN, 80 PERCENT OF ADULTS HAVE COLLEGE EDUCATIONS.

BOZEMAN, MONTANA: Shortly after signing the Louisiana Purchase in 1803, President Thomas Jefferson commissioned Meriwether Lewis and William Clark to set out on a perilous two and one-half year journey to find a practical route across the western half of the continent.

When the Louis and Clark Expedition reached Bozeman Pass, one could only surmise the majestic beauty of the valley below. The Gallatin Valley is surrounded by four mountain ranges and crisscrossed by several rivers. Native American tribes, including the Blackfeet and Sioux, called the area home for thousands of years.

Bozeman is now considered to be one of the most livable cities in America. Its mix of big views with small town charm combine for an attractive lifestyle. Main Street, all of eight blocks, is known for its talented craftsman and family-owned businesses. The town is also home to the Museum of the Rockies, Gibson Guitars, and Simms Fishing Products.

Black Bull, former site of the historic Leachman Angus Ranch, is located six miles from downtown Bozeman. Members have access to a Weiskopf-designed golf course, a 14-acre practice facility, the new Corral Clubhouse, an aquatics center, and four miles of hiking trails. Homes within the community recall designs of Old West ranches with ample use of timber, stone, and glass.

I CAN LIVE ANYWHERE...I CHOSE HERE

Tom Weiskopf, 16-time PGA TOUR winner, is an avid outdoorsman. His summer routine includes hunting and fishing in Montana's wilderness.

“My career as a PGA TOUR player and golf course architect provided me the luxury to live anywhere...and I chose here,” said Weiskopf. “The honor to be selected to design a course in my hometown doubled the pleasure!

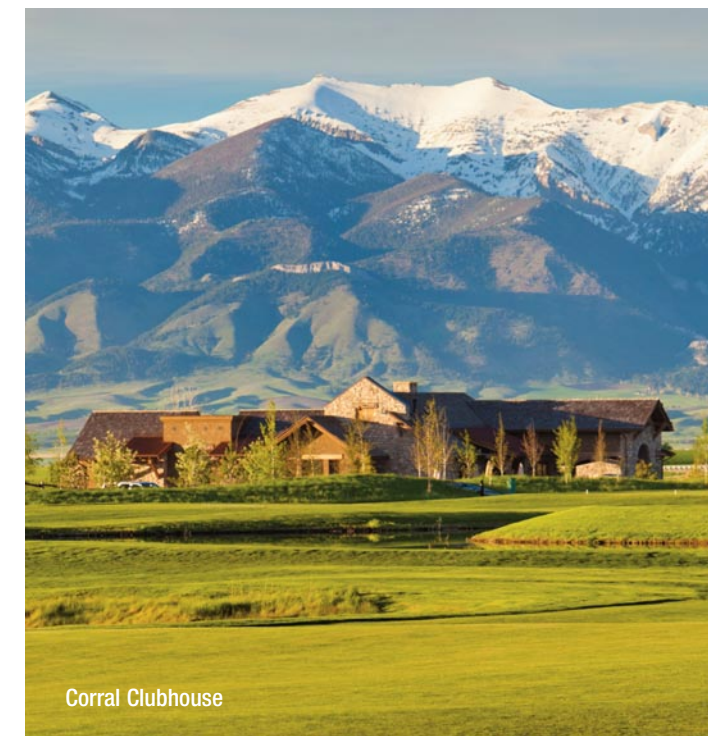

“The course is walkable; has tremendous water features; generous fairways; and old-fashioned, rough-edged bunkers,” vaunted Weiskopf. “I grew up carrying my bag. So, I made sure the longest walk, from green to tee, was no more than 50 yards. At first glance, the course looks fairly straightforward. You will be surprised by the amount of movement from hole to hole.” ■

“EVERY SO OFTEN, you will see a family playing golf in blue jeans. This is Montana after all.” – DAVID BAUCOM, GENERAL MANAGER

The club's two lakes and natural feeder streams provide an ideal habitat for a healthy population of wild trout.

Black Bull's practice facility includes a double-sided driving range, putting greens maintained to USGA specs, different levels of cut grass (to simulate different lies), and multiple bunkers.
