BOCA RATON, FLORIDA: At this year's U.S. Open, controversy swirled over the detailed, laser measured, putting guide players utilized. Proper alignment and a solid stroke generally yielded success. "Technology is impacting how everyone plays," said Paul Clivio, director of golf at St. Andrews Country Club. "Analytics are replacing gut-feel."

The Golf Performance Center at St. Andrews Country Club offers one of the more comprehensive teaching facilities in South Florida. Indoor hitting bays outfitted with V1 Digital Coaching Systems and FlightScope Launch Monitors provide real time feedback. "The ability to visually analyze your swing provides significant benefits," explained Clivio. "It's a tremendous educational tool."

"Our private community has a long history of quality golf instruction. Bob Toski is our pro emeritus instructor and we offer a series of teaching clinics by today's 'Top 50' instructors," said Clivio. "Past personalities include Todd Anderson from TPC Sawgrass, and Michael Breed from the Golf Channel."

"We have passed the halfway mark on a $25 million capital improvement plan and recently broke ground on an 11,000 square-foot spa and multi-recreational fields. Plans are also under way to remodel our fitness and tennis facilities next year." ■
