A PURIST'S DREAM, NOW ACCESSIBLE

"It's the 8th wonder of the golfing world as far as I'm concerned."

— REES JONES

BOULDER CITY, NEVADA: Cascata Golf Club, long considered a "top-5" golf destination in the West, used to be an ultra-private playground for high rollers and down-on-their-luck casino whales. Today, access is attainable to all who appreciate the very best.

"Our greens are maintained at PGA TOUR speeds throughout the year," said Andy Elliott, head golf professional at Cascata. "The course is fair. You won't find hidden trouble and good players can card a low score if they keep it in play. The on-course experience is simple, yet refined; relaxed, enjoyable and unhurried. We understand time is your greatest luxury, second only to privacy. We work hard to craft an environment where you are at ease to enjoy yourself without worry."

Rees Jones conducted an extensive search in the Vegas Valley to find an ideal site for the $80 million golf project. "I feel Cascata is some of my best work," praised Jones. "Cascata is on the perfect site carved by ancient riverbeds. Ample land provided options. It's unique and one of a kind. I would even go so far as to tout it's the 8th wonder of the golfing world as far as I'm concerned."

"Deep canyon walls frame each hole much like the sand dunes of Scotland," detailed Jones. "The course requires strategy and has proper risk-reward options. Natural rock outcroppings and water features make Cascata as much an oasis as nearby Las Vegas. It is worth the trip if you are coming into town."

VIP OF GOLF

The arrival experience is noteworthy. Iron gates, reminiscent of Old English manors, mark Cascata's entranceway. Once you complete an uphill climb to the clubhouse, valet is quick to greet. ►

After check-in, nice touches include a complimentary golf shoeshine and personalized locker name plate.

A forecaddie meet-and-greet provides an overview of Cascata’s practice facilities and an “inside scoop” on local knowledge. Those accustomed to private club service standards, will feel right at home.

“The course routing is superb,” said Elliott. “The terrain seems to ‘spring alive’ as you step onto the first tee box. While the elevated desert vistas can be visually intimidating, it doesn’t mean Cascata is beat-you-up tough. Routing follows natural streambeds up and into the mountains and then down again. Tee times are amply spaced apart and it’s unlikely you’ll see another group until the 19th hole.

“After golf, enjoy a drink or meal on the patio as dusk approaches and shadows spider over the hillside peaks,” recommended Elliott. “Our Tuscan-style 37,000 square-foot clubhouse offers Old World ambiance of unpretentious luxury. A collection of rare tobaccos is stocked in the cigar lounge’s custom-designed humidor.

“A day at Cascata feels special and comes with a sense of accomplishment. When you’re here, you’re treated as a celebrity. While the overall affair lasts only a day, memories last a lifetime from one of the ‘best in the West.’” ■

“CASCATA’S GREENS have a tendency to run away from you toward the mountain. Consequently, spend extra time on the practice green judging speed. It’s common to misjudge speed and blow your ball past the hole.”

CASCATA’S SIGNATURE feature is a dramatic waterfall that cascades 418 feet from atop a hillside, skirts the practice facility, and rushes through the center of the clubhouse. The club’s 37,000 square-foot clubhouse offers exceptional dining and event space capable of handling the most lavish of weddings and special events.
