HENDERSON, NEVADA (25 minutes from the Las Vegas Strip): This year, Las Vegas will attract more than 42 million visitors from around the world. Sandwiched between every imaginable diversion known to man, approximately 900,000 vacationers will opt for a round of golf during their trip.

“The entertainment capital of the world is known for doing things big,” said Eric Dutt, director of golf operations at Lake Las Vegas Resort. “Our town smashes Guinness World Records on a regular basis. As an example, when The High Roller observation wheel opened at 550 feet tall, it surpassed the size of the London Eye and Singapore Flyer by a long shot.”

Reflection Bay, a Jack Nicklaus Signature course at Lake Las Vegas Resort also holds a notable record. The smartly designed layout plays around the largest man-made lake in Nevada (holding three billion gallons of fresh water).

“We have now partnered with Southshore Country Club, carved into the rugged hillside, for the opportunity to ‘double down’ and play two of Jack’s best designs during your trip,” revealed Dutt.

“We provide a more relaxed, less frantic setting. You feel removed, yet in less time than it takes you to finish your Starbucks coffee, you can be on The Strip,” described Dutt. “I like to refer to our golf destination as the ‘Palm Desert of Las Vegas.’” ■
