

Golfweek raters ranked Streamsong Black (No. 2), Streamsong Red (No. 3), and Streamsong Blue (No. 4) as best public courses you can play in the state of Florida. Quite an accomplishment considering there are more than 1,000 choices in the state.

Streamsong Black's clubhouse was named "Clubhouse of the Year" by Golf Inc. Its Bone Valley Tavern references the land's history that once was covered by sea water. It's common for caddies to stumble upon marine fossils and shark teeth while looking for a guest's errant tee shot amid the sand dunes.

Streamsong Resort

a feast for the senses, a haven for the soul

"If you parachuted me into Streamsong, and you gave me 75 guesses as to where I'm at in the world, my 73rd guess might be somewhere in Florida." –TOM DOAK

STREAMSONG, FLORIDA: Since Streamsong stormed the golf scene six years ago, the resort has received over 70 major industry awards for its facilities. Accolades are far ranging from Golf Digest naming Streamsong Black "Best New Course of 2018" to Smart Meetings identifying the hotel as a "Smart Stars Award Winner" in hospitality, meetings, and events.

"What took other destination resorts generations to establish a brand has taken us only a few short years," lauded Rich Mogensen, general manager at Streamsong Resort. "The product is that good.

"Our plan had always been to offer three distinctly different golf experiences," said Mogensen. "We started with Streamsong Red and Streamsong Blue and when demand started to outstrip supply, we built Streamsong Black."

With its golf status among purists proven, Streamsong Resort has expanded its roster of outdoor activities. "Our bass fishing, sporting clays, and archery expeditions are growing in scale and popularity," said Mogensen. "You might be surprised to learn our resort's non-golf activity revenue is about evenly split with our golf income. The modern convention space coupled with our long list of outside activities provides an outlet for corporate meetings. Last year, more than 400 groups experienced our warm hospitality." ■

STREAMSONG RESORT sits on 16,000 acres of formally mined land. During extraction, 15 million cubic yards of sand was stockpiled. For the better part of six decades the sand sat dormant, buffered by wind and rainstorms. With no development surrounding the courses, you hear nothing except for elements of weather, wildlife, and native grasses swaying in the breeze.
