

The Colors of CUISINART RESORTS

"I took prevailing trade winds into account. Hitting into a headwind or crosswind is one of the most difficult shots in golf. My tip: Start with a solid foundation and take a light grip to help you make a rhythmic, free-flowing swing into the wind." – GREG NORMAN

ANGUILLA, BRITISH WEST INDIES: Google's definition of Caribbean blue is a mix of colors turquoise and coral. "Locals have become quite adept at telling the time of day by the color of the sea," explained Don Johnson, director of golf operations at CuisinArt Resorts. "The hues subtly change from dawn to dusk."

CuisinArt Resorts is two sister hotels (The Reef by CuisinArt and CuisinArt Golf Resort and Spa) next to one of the finest beaches in the world. "Anguilla attracts the well-heeled from around the globe seeking solace and relaxation," continued Johnson. "Pictures of our beach really don't do it justice. All your senses come alive as you curl your toes in our powder sugar, warm sand."

Complementing CuisinArt's beach is a Greg Norman Signature course with unobstructed views of the island of St. Maarten.

"Our golf experience matches our beach experience. Greg and his team created something special," detailed Johnson. "His vision was to craft a design void of blind shots and straight forward risk/reward options. None of our greens have false fronts and sand is flashed to the top of bunker faces to clearly delineate trouble."

On holes No. 2 and No. 10, simply being on the green tells only half the story.

"We have a gigantic 12,000 square-foot double green. Depending on the pin position and results from your approach shot, you might have a fair amount of real estate left to cover," teased Johnson.

In order to ease your trip to Anguilla, CuisinArt Resorts has a special golf offer that's hard to pass up. "No matter which of our properties you are staying at, this year we are offering resort guests a $100 guest fee that includes rental clubs and golf shoes," reported Johnson. "It's one of the most compelling golf opportunities anywhere."

"Instead of describing our Caribbean blue waters, maybe I should be lauding Caribbean green!" ■
