LIGHTS, CAMERA, ACTION! AT CASA DE CAMPO RESORT

LA ROMANA, DOMINICAN REPUBLIC: Casa de Campo has long been a luxury retreat for the rich and famous. Originally one of the country's largest sugar plantations, the resort developed a reputation among Hollywood elite coveted for its privacy, warm weather, and oceanfront golf. Much of Francis Ford Coppola's epic Apocalypse Now was filmed along the picturesque Chavon River (bordering the property); and the Altos de Chavón's 5,000-seat Grecian-style amphitheater at Casa de Campo was inaugurated by Frank Sinatra in 1982.

Beyond its three Dye-designed golf courses, Casa de Campo has a 370-slip Marina & Yacht Club, Polo & Equestrian Club, La Terraza Tennis Center, a 245-acre Shooting Club, a dozen dining options, and three powder sand beaches.

"Our golf is unmatched," praised Robert Birtel, director of golf operations. "But, I must admit, enjoying a piña colada, made with freshly squeezed pineapple juice at our Minitas Beach Club, while soaking up the sun isn't a bad alternative." ■

TEETH OF THE DOG is the only golf course in the Caribbean that's in GOLF Magazine's "Top 100 Courses in the World"—an award the course has held since the list was established in 1983. Heaven 7 refers to Pete Dye's septet of holes sitting against the craggy coral formations rising out of the azure Caribbean Sea.
