

If Not Now, WHEN?

Streamsong Resort – at the crossroads to extraordinary.

STREAMSONG, FLORIDA: Fresh off his Open Championship win at Royal Lytham & St Annes Golf Club in England in 1974, Gary Player headed to a local pub for a celebratory drink. “We passed around the Claret Jug among friends, drinking from it in celebratory cheers,” recalled Player. “Upon my return to the hotel, I asked my caddie where we placed the trophy. Luckily, the barman had kept it safe behind the counter!”

“Golf is a great social game should you choose it to be,” continued Player. “You can compete against your friends and, if it’s true friendship and one that will last because there are many that don’t for whatever reason, you applaud each other’s victories and commiserate each other’s defeats, too.”

BUDDIES’ TRIPS WELCOME

Located about an hour from Tampa and 90 minutes from Orlando, Streamsong Resort has become the go-to destination for buddies’ trips. “You can’t go wrong with a visit to Streamsong,” expressed Scott Wilson, director of golf. “Our warm weather and attractive rates only enhance your stay and, with the winter season coming to a close, carts are available. For the ultimate stay-and-play ambience, reserve accommodations at The Clubhouse. It’s the perfect private spot [there are only 12 rooms] for after-play banter with your friends and colleagues.”

Streamsong Resort owes much of its greatness to its land’s past. Built on a former phosphate mine, the resort’s 16,000 acres are punctuated with dramatic elevation changes, abundant lakes, and 15 million cubic yards of sand—a sharp contrast to the rest of central Florida’s relatively flat topography.

In its 2019 “America’s 100 Greatest Public Courses,” Golf Digest ranked Streamsong Red No. 19, Streamsong Blue No. 24, and Streamsong Black No. 32.

“The captivating geography is what sold golf course architects Bill Coore/Ben Crenshaw [Streamsong Red] and Tom Doak [Streamsong Blue] on the project,” continued Wilson. “Then, when renowned designer Gil Hanse surveyed the area for Streamsong Black, he knew the landscape lent itself to create one of the great golf venues in the world.

“I like to refer to Streamsong as a story with two tales. I encourage you to play one of our three courses with friends in the morning followed by an afternoon of guided bass fishing, sporting clays, or archery,” recommended Wilson. “Our shooting guides are NSCA [National Sporting Clays Association] certified and allow you can select from 12 gauge and 20 gauge Beretta A300 semiautomatic shotguns on a 12-station course. Our archery course is equally entertaining with five Olympic-size targets ranging from 10 to 30 feet. Instructors are USA Archery Level 1 certified to teach you the proper way to set, aim, and release a recurve bow.” ■
