WEST POINT, MISSISSIPPI: The state is renowned as the birthplace of America's blues music and as a cornerstone of Southern culture, known for its deep-rooted hospitality, comfort food, and religious beliefs.

"Our state flower—the magnolia—couldn't be more apropos," stated Jim Clay, general manager at Old Waverly. "The blooms represent hospitality and beauty, two attributes we strive for at Old Waverly."

TWO COURSES, ONE WELCOMING CLUB

At Old Waverly, golf comes first. The original design by Jerry Pate and Bob Cupp is a plunge into pure Southern beauty amid lakes, pines, and hardwoods. At the other end of the architectural spectrum, Gil Hanse's Mossy Oak is a modern, minimalist, links-style design. "Our two courses complement each other. Old Waverly, designed by Jerry Pate and Bob Cupp, is a traditional design with tree-lined fairways, cut straight out of a forest. While Mossy Oak, designed by Gil Hanse, is an open layout with strategic bunkering that forces golfers to play various types of shots," described Clay.

"Old Waverly was designed to capture the best of timeless golf with a traditional old-style golf design and an experience you will repeat. I saw that in the land from the very first time I visited. Mossy Oak is really special, and Gil Hanse created something truly spectacular. It's a love affair for its founders and members." —JERRY PATE, OLD WAVERLY CHAIRMAN

"It's a lovely piece of ground; I was very pleasantly surprised by the rolling nature, character, and topography of this particular site. Combining that with the openness of it, the first image I had was of Shinnecock Hills." —GIL HANSE, GOLF ARCHITECT
